

Managing Successful Programmes (MSP™) 2007 Foundation & Practitioner (MSP2007F&P)

Continuous change and improvement occurs as a natural process as a result of the organisation's operation. Substantial risk is involved in carrying out complex, difficult and often unclear changes. 'Managing Successful Programmes' (MSP™) represents programme management best practice in successfully delivering such transformational change.

It is a principles and process based approach founded on best practice for use when managing a programme. Programmes are more than just the 'sum of their parts', in other words its project outputs. This concepts leads to the inevitable conclusion that something needs to be applied along with these projects to bring about their coordination and integration into achieving a strategic goal.

MSP is designed as a flexible approach to be adapted for the needs of each organisation and its programmes.
