David has over 20 years of experience in project, program and portfolio management, working predominantly in Australia, New Zealand and Asia. While David has direct experience managing programmes and projects, he has worked with many organisations to ensure that they are able to deliver their expected benefits and products, ensuring that organisational strategic objectives are met. This has often been achieved through the use of a formalised Health Check Assessment being carried out by David, resulting in a report stating the findings and recommendations to improve the organisations capability. This is then translated into an implementation plan to provide skills transfer and skills uplift, through workshops, one on one coaching and/or formalised instructor-led coaching. David's skills transfer style is that of a blended approach, combining formal training, workshops and practical examples that are focused around the clients' specific issues and current work. The aim is to improve the competencies and capabilities of the client, while at the same time adding value by helping to deliver an end goal.
