Definition of Guided Learning and Directed Development

Guided learning: Guided learning is learning that is under the immediate guidance or supervision of the ILX team.

Directed development: This is development that is not under the immediate guidance or supervision of a member of ILX but will help you as the learner prepare for the examination. ILX delivers directed development in multiple formats:

- ILX full eLearning: Covers the full course content in a digital learning format allowing you to learn at a time and pace to suit.
- ILX Direct Development Learning Resources: Includes a range of materials eg reading, videos and on-the-job development. We follow the three “Rs” of directed development.

All required directed development is provided to you within the ILX portal and must be completed prior to taking your exam.

What are the three “Rs” of directed development?

Reading: This is processing a range of materials, typically this will be written but can also include recorded audio and video content from approved APM sources.

Research: The anticipated follow on from the reading step enabling the learner to explore adjacent and ancillary material to deepen understanding of primary topics. Typically, this may include follow on articles, conversations with colleagues and peers and review of personal experience in the primary topic.

Reflection: The third aspect of directed development which allows time for reflective processing of the learners reading and research. This allows the opportunity to prepare notes and questions that the learner can address via the guided learning.

The directed development with the notional timings for each of the three “Rs” is accessed via the ILX portal. The timings are to enable you to plan your approach to the course ensuring completion of the learning objectives.

Responsibilities

Learner: As the learner you’re responsible for planning your time for completing all elements of your chosen learning delivery and confirming that completion prior to booking the exam at a date and time as specified by you.

Instructor: Guiding and directing through the course materials and directed learning to support learners in achieving the learning objectives and assessment criteria.

ILX: Support, through delivery planning learning and services an excellent learner experience from enquiry to post course guidance.

APM: The APM are responsible for the design and maintenance of the qualification syllabus and the accreditation of the training providers and the management of the exams.

By now you should have:

- Watched the APM Learner suitability video available here
- Completed the free APM Competence framework assessment which benchmarks your performance against the 29 competences in the APM framework available here. This self-assessment is free but requires you to create an APM login.
- Compared your performance with APM defined role descriptions.
- Understood the requirements for both Guided and Directed Learning as outlined in this learning plan.
- Committed to the learning hours and plan required to support your development, enabling you to meet the assessment criteria for your chosen course.

Next steps

- Complete your guided learning in full via your chosen delivery method (virtual/classroom/mentoring workshops).
- Complete all elements of your directed development which is available via the ILX portal.

For the ILX Direct Development Learning Resources please ensure once you have completed a task you tick the corresponding box. This task is not considered complete until the overall progress is at 100%.
